

Key Points:

- We are all uniquely different
- We are made up of things that stay the same and things that change
- We should be proud of our individuality
- We should respect that everyone is unique and special in their own right

This presentation is linked to our book What Does LGBT+ Mean?

You don't need the book for this presentation but it may be a useful for further discussion and additional learning. (Available from popnolly.com)

How many people are there on planet
EARTH?

7,000,000,000

7 Billion...

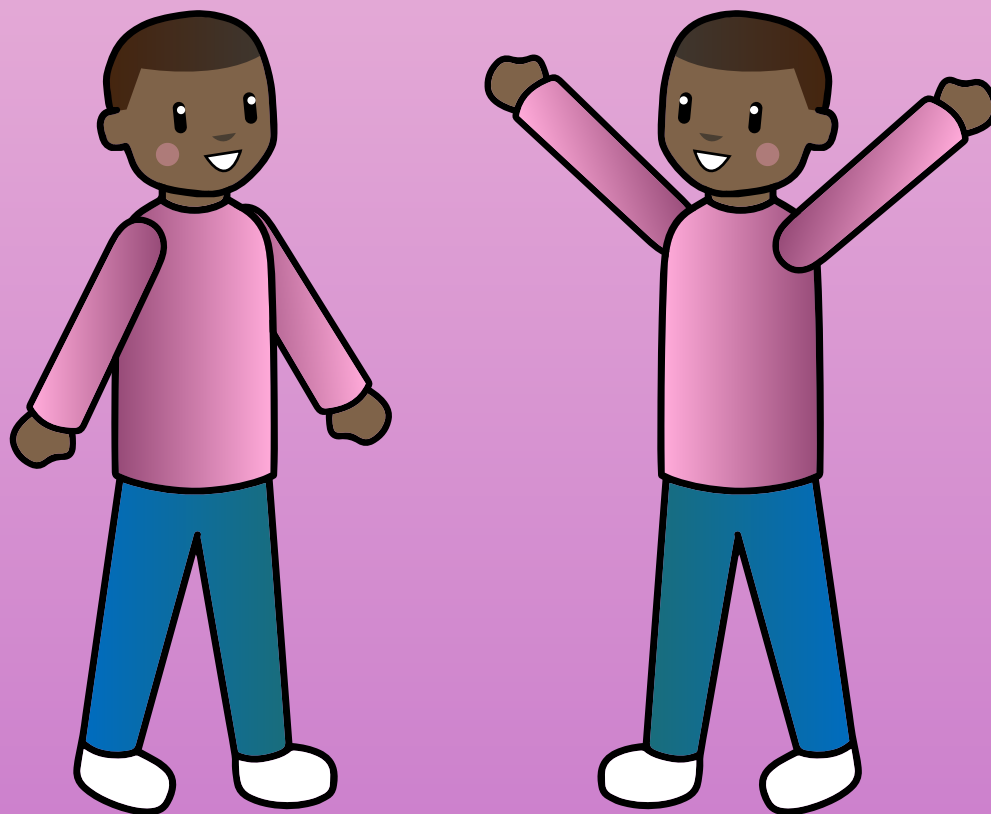

That's more than the amount of stars you can see in the night sky.

How many people are the SAME?

None!

Even identical twins have some things which are different.

Everyone on the planet is their own special mix of many different things...

...and your mix is different from everyone else's.

Your unique mix is called your...

IDENTITY

and it's what makes you, YOU!

Watch this video to find out more...

Watch Identity Explained for Kids at youtube.com/popnolly

What about you?

What parts of you will always stay the same?

(E.g. Where you were born.)

What parts of you might change?

(E.g. Your favourite food.)

Our identity is like a recipe.

When baking a cake, lots of different ingredients will be used.
The ingredients by themselves do not make the cake...

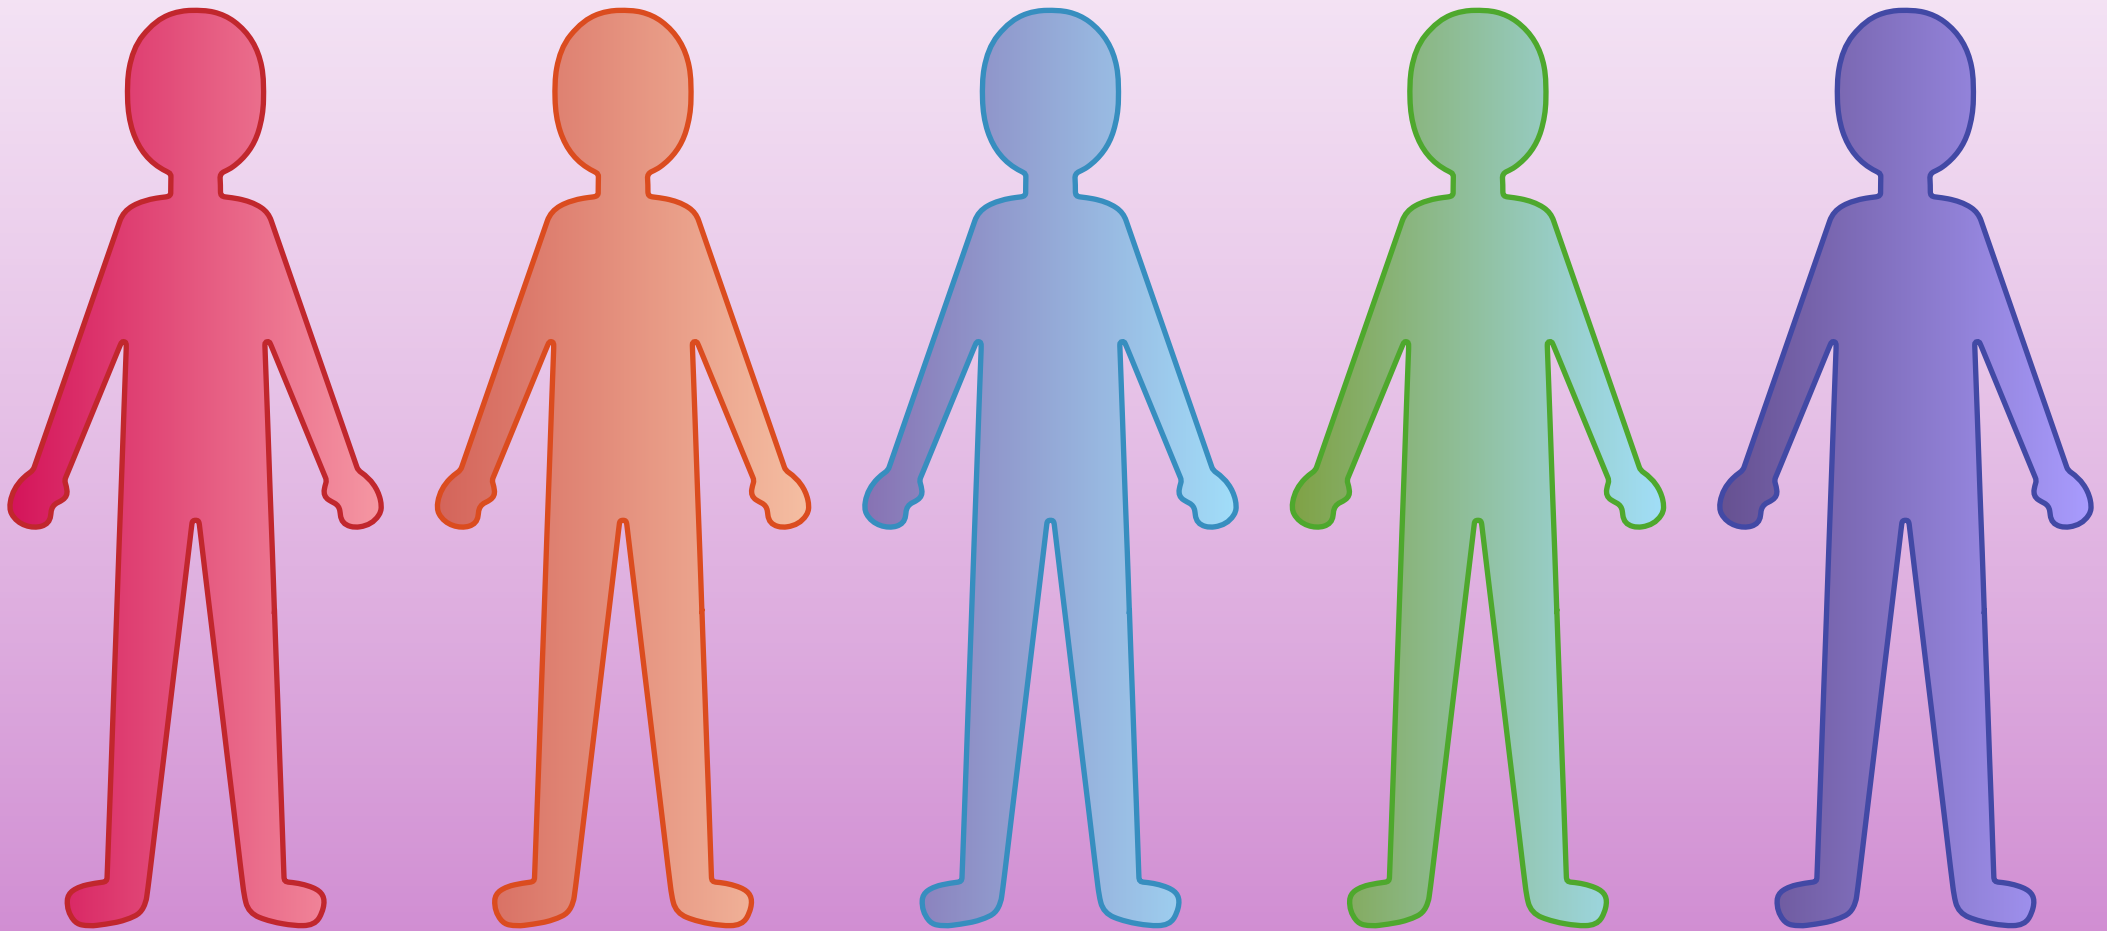

...but put them together and you have a masterpiece.

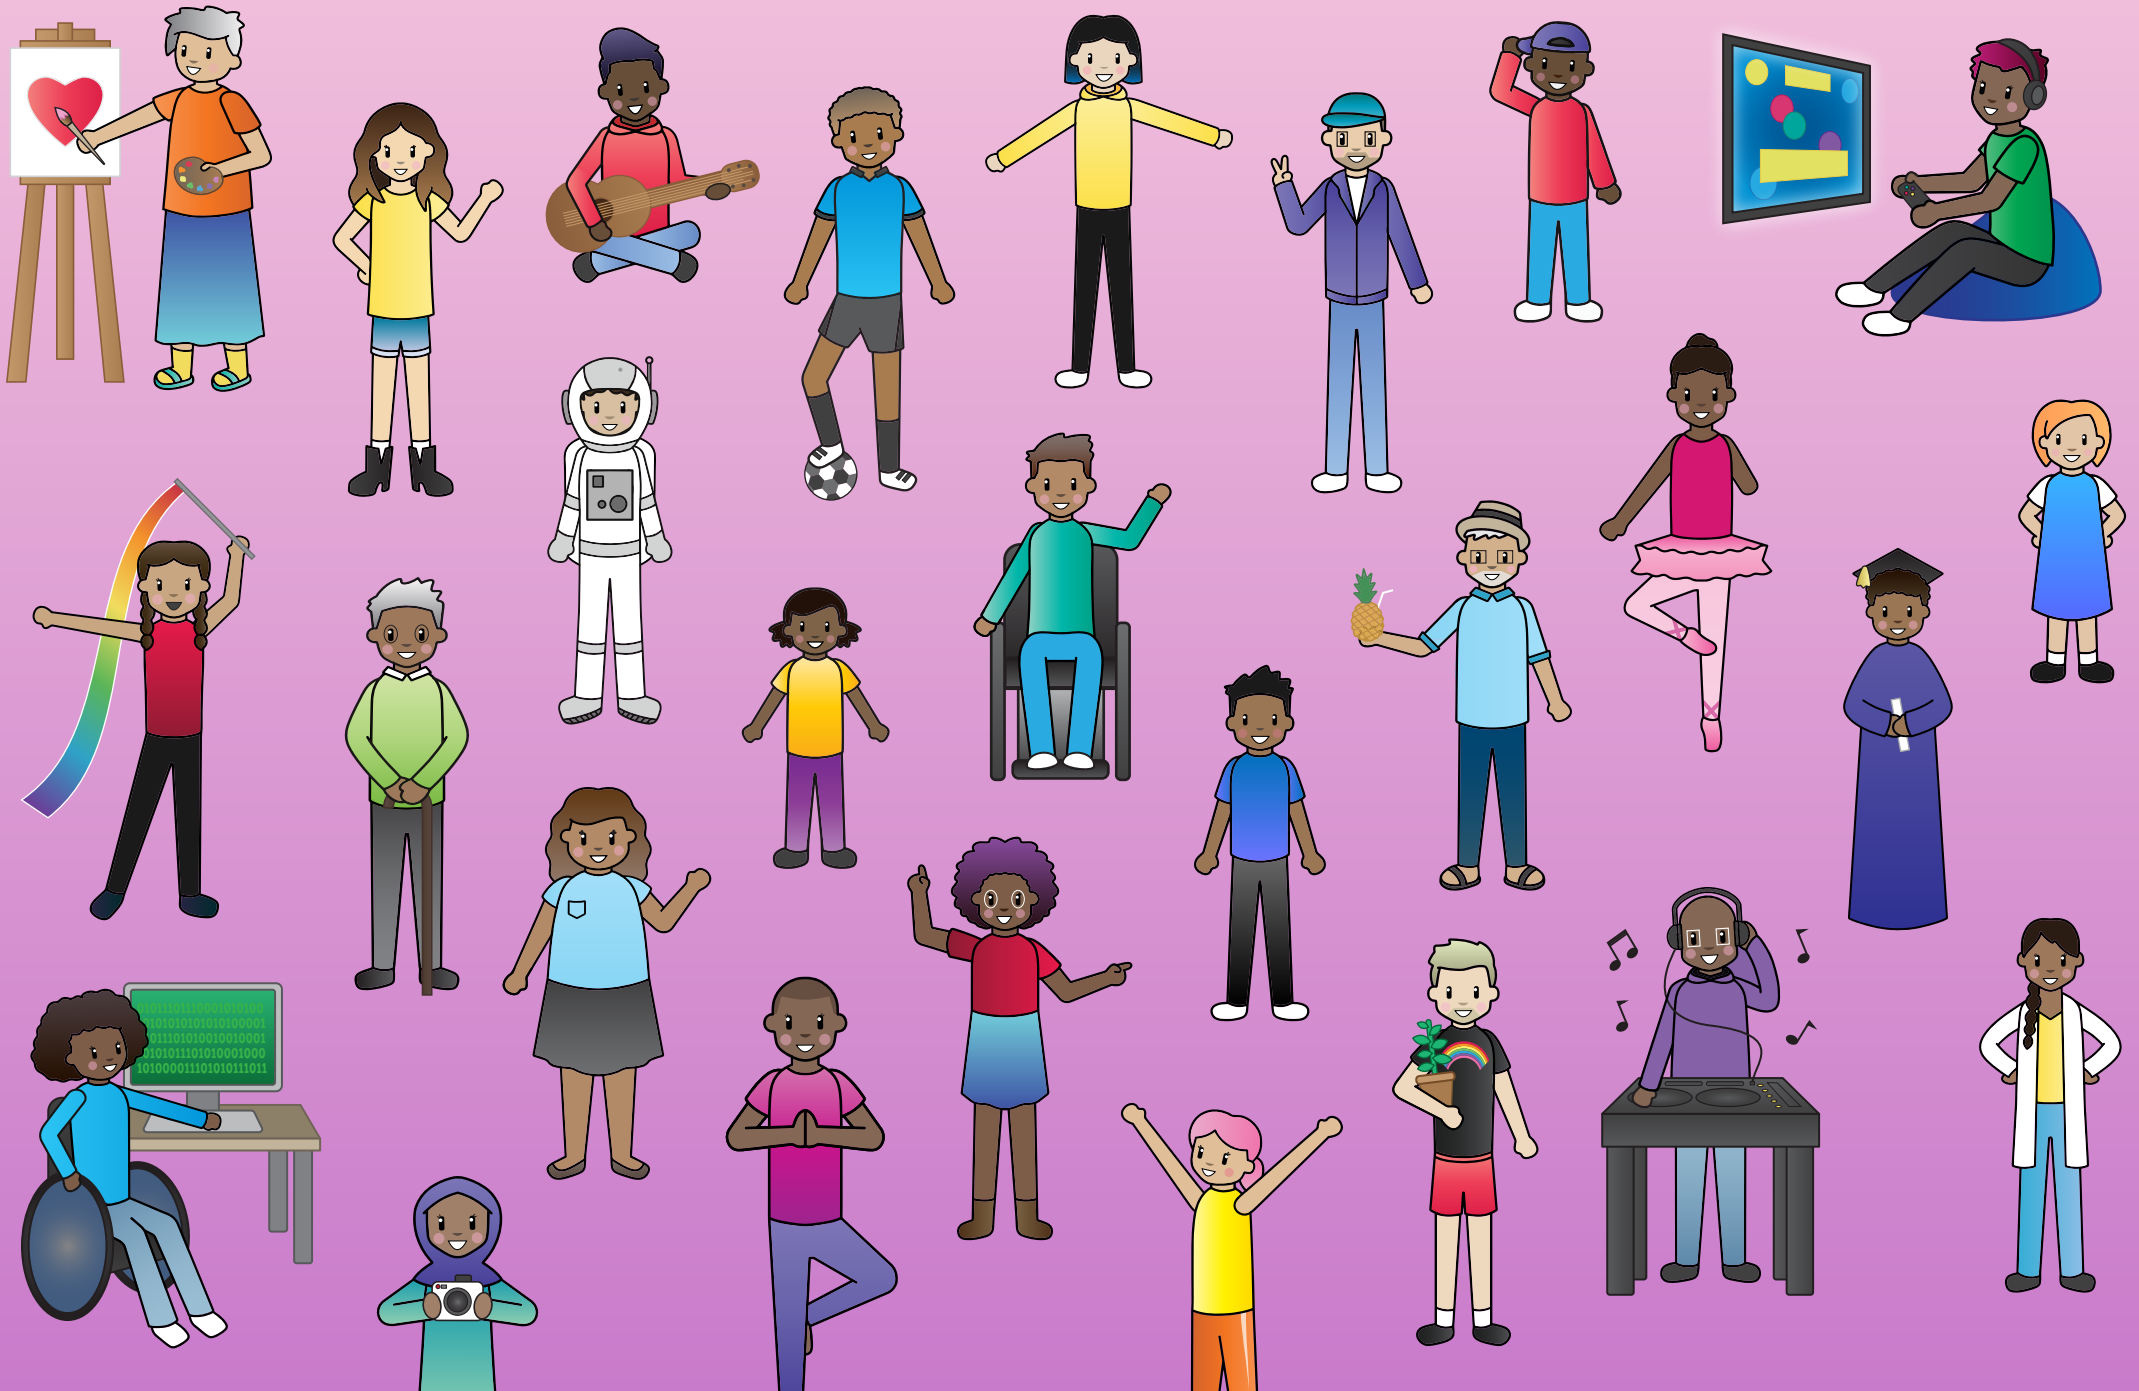

Just like a cake, our identity is made up of lots of different parts.

Talk to the person next to you. Can you find some things that are the same about you and some things that are different? Think about your likes and dislikes, your core values and the things that are important to you.

Everyone is different and that's a good thing.

And everyone deserves to be treated with...

RESPECT

What does that look like in your school?

How do we show respect to each other – adults and children?

Take a moment to think about what makes you special.

Feel proud of being unique.

You're the only you on the whole planet and that is really something!

